Aperitivo

dolce far niente

/SWEET NOTHINGS/

Aperitivo is an Italian tradition that refers to the period before dinner and is associated with a pleasant social ritual. It is a time when Italians gather with their friends, family and relax after a day of work before dinner.

The basis of an aperitif is a drink that is served before a meal to whet the appetite. Typical aperitifs are Campari, Aperol, Negroni, Spritz and Martini. These drinks have a refreshing taste and are often garnished with slices of citrus fruits or olives.

In addition to the drinks, an important part of an Italian aperitivo is the choice of food.

Among the popular aperitivo dishes include cheeses, hams, olives, various types of salami, bruschetta and various delicious delicacies.

Aperitivo is more than just food and drinks, it's a social ritual. These gatherings with friends and family are an opportunity to pleasant conversation, relaxation and dolce far niente after a busy day.
